Q: What is the difference between invalid and not found (not valid) in a sitemap? I am looking at a sitemap from a website. This sitemap is using different combinations of and . For example: 2016-04-17T20:26:14.7053567Z In the same sitemap there are other links which have an extra word. For example: 2016-04-17T20:26:14.7053567Z Is the extra word something that needs to be there? Is there a need to put it? What is the difference between invalid and not found (not valid) in a sitemap? A: Is the extra word something that needs to be there? Is there a need to put it? yes. The extra word is a short-form string that Google might use to identify the page in question in a search result, so it's often a good idea to include it in the sitemap. Google considers it to be "not valid" because they're trying to be explicit. So it's not something that they can search for, but it can be in the sitemap because it can be used for a few things, like a text field or maybe a tag.

What is the difference between invalid and not found (not valid) in a sitemap? I can't answer that one, because I'm not familiar with that, but the rest of the answer should be clear. Primary fallopian tube malignancy (PFTM) is a rare and lethal gynecologic malignancy with a poor 5-year overall survival rate (35%) (Frankel et al., 2008, Obstet. Gynecol. 111:1030-1039; Pogue-Geile et al., 2005, Gynecol. Oncol. 106:74-81). PFTM is genetically characterized as a high-grade epithelial neoplasm with epithelial features (Gust et al., 2010, Clin. Cancer Res. 16:700-707). The majority of PFTM
